RETIREMENT OPTIONS

MAXIMUM - The member is eligible to receive the largest benefit based on the retirement calculation. If the member dies and has not received the total amount of his/her accumulated contributions and interest documented as of the retirement date, the designated beneficiary(ies) will receive the remaining contributions in a lump sum. Monthly retirement payments are structured to deplete the member's contributions and interest in less than 2.5 years. Therefore, no funds will be available for the beneficiary if the member dies after that time.

OPTION No. 1 - The member elects to receive a retirement allowance payable throughout life, which is slightly less than the maximum amount. If the member dies and has not received the total amount of his/her accumulated contributions and interest documented as of the retirement date, the designated beneficiary(ies) will receive the remaining contributions in a lump sum. Monthly retirement payments are structured to deplete the member's contributions and interest in approximately 8-10 years. Therefore, no funds will be available for the beneficiary if the member dies after that time.

OPTION No. 2 - The member elects to receive a reduced retirement allowance payable throughout life. Upon the death of the member, the designated beneficiary will receive the same monthly benefit amount as the member, payable for life. If the beneficiary dies before the member, the monthly benefit amount will be increased to the maximum benefit the month after NOMERS is notified of the beneficiary's death.

OPTION No. 3 - The member elects to receive a reduced retirement allowance payable throughout life. Upon the death of the member, the designated beneficiary will receive one-half of the monthly benefit amount payable for life. If the beneficiary dies before the member, the monthly benefit will be increased to the maximum benefit the month after NOMERS is notified of the beneficiary's death.

OPTION No. 4 - The member elects to receive a retirement allowance payable for life with some other benefit payable to either the member or the designated beneficiary. The benefit shall be calculated by the Actuary based on the equivalent actuarial value of the member's retirement allowance. This option must be approved by the Board of Trustees.

NOTE: According to Louisiana law, pension benefits, including DROP funds received or accumulated during marriage, are community property. As such, an ex-spouse, regardless of the number of marriages or the length of marriage, may be entitled to a portion of the retirement benefit depending on the spouse's community property interest. If a member is legally married at any time during his/her employment and chooses a retirement option that does not provide the spouse at least 50 percent of the retirement benefits based on the spouse's community property interest, the spouse must sign a Spousal Consent To Waive Benefits form.

NOMERS requires a legally correct and acceptable court order before community assets are divided. The retirement application will not be processed until NOMERS receives a court order regarding the division of retirement assets.
